MAISHA

Annual Report 2025

“Witnessing and accompanying them through their growth, transformation, and empowerment is a memory that fills me with pride and a sense of privilege to have been able to witness it, and that they allowed me to be a part of those moments in their lives. Seeing them again after graduation, empowered as mothers, determined to give their babies and themselves a life of opportunity, is something precious that I will always treasure. Even now, while in Chile, receiving calls or messages (...) is a reminder of what we experienced together and the friendships we formed.”

Maisha Executive Director

Dear Maisha Network:

This year 2025 has been a period of consolidation, learning and projection for our foundation, reaffirming once again our commitment to pregnant women, mothers and young people in Kenya, moving forward with responsibility, a long-term vision and focusing our attention on people.

This year we made significant progress in implementing our five programs and strengthened our partnerships with both local and international institutions, including universities, health and educational institutions, civil society organizations, and government agencies. These efforts yielded results that reflect the ongoing work of our team and the trust of our volunteers, collaborators, partners, and donors. Every decision was guided by our values and our goal of creating a positive and sustainable impact in Kenya.

I would like to express my special gratitude to the Maisha team, field coordinators, local and international volunteers, the Embassy of Chile in Kenya, the Chilean Ministry of Foreign Affairs, partner universities and organizations, and all those who collaborate with our work. Their commitment, professionalism, and dedication have made possible the progress we present in this report. Their contribution has been fundamental in transforming challenges into opportunities and objectives into concrete results.

This year was significantly marked by the implementation of the "Menstruation Without Rules" project within the framework of the “Chile Fund” against Hunger and Poverty, where, with the support of the Chilean Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Chilean Agency for International Cooperation for Development (AGCID) and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), we worked to continue our international cooperation efforts, providing sewing and finance training to 50 women in vulnerable situations in Nairobi, and providing sexual and affective education training to 4,000 young people and 100 educators from three of the fifteen slums in Nairobi, in addition to delivering 12,000 reusable menstrual pads to girls and young women. Many thanks to Chile Fund and to those behind this great initiative, to our local partner Kianda Foundation, to our allies AIEP and TeenSTAR Chile, to our field operations coordinators, Verónica Córdova Ruiz-Tagle and Montana Njaaga, to our local monitors, and to our dear volunteers who leave so much behind in their countries of origin to go and collaborate with Maisha's work on the field.

Likewise, in 2025 we carried out the project “Human Rights and Citizenship”, where thanks to the PAEE fund, from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Chile, we trained 278 young people from Nairobi slums, together with the Strathmore University School of Law, in Human Rights and Civic Education, being the first project executed within the framework of our new and fifth Maisha program.

We cannot overlook the IF Social Impact Prize 2025 won by Maisha Foundation with the “EmpowerHER” project, which recognizes the economic empowerment of women that we carry out through our sustainability program.

Looking to the future, we face the coming period with optimism and responsibility. We will continue working for the Maisha mothers and all those who can benefit from the wonderful work our foundation carries out, confident that the path we have traveled prepares us to respond effectively to the demands of a constantly changing world.

2026 holds great changes and challenges for us. We began the year by moving to our new Maisha home, providing us with a better space to welcome the mothers who come to our foundation each year. We also started the year with the addition of Nicole Espinosa as operations coordinator in Kenya, and with the departure of Verónica Córdova, who will soon be returning to Chile. Thank you both so much for everything!

I invite you to explore this 2025 Annual Report, which reflects not only our results, but also our conviction that doing things right and focusing on the dignity of people can achieve great things.

Warm regards,
Rocío Rivero Velarde
Executive Director

Letter from Domtila, Co-founder and Director

As 2025 comes to an end, we reflect on a year of challenges and triumphs. The doctors' and nurses' strikes presented tough times, especially for expectant mothers, but we persevered.

We're grateful to our benefactors and supporters who helped us empower young mothers through the Maisha outreach team, teaching valuable skills in schools.

To our surprise and joy, some of these young mothers have become trainers themselves, paying it forward and inspiring others. This ripple effect is a testament to the power of empowerment and community.

To our generous partners, may this success be a stepping stone to even greater opportunities for you. To the Maisha team Kenya and team Chile, thank you for your tireless efforts in taking Maisha Foundation to new heights.

As we look to the future, we invite you to join us in our vision for a bigger Maisha Centre, where we can support more vulnerable young mothers and nurture them into confident, empowered women. Together, let's make a lasting impact!

Maisha means Life

What is Maisha?

We are

We are a foundation that arises from the collaboration between Chile and Kenya, committed to the dignity of people.

Mission

Our mission is to support and offer growth opportunities to mothers, pregnant women, and young people in vulnerable contexts.

Vision

Our vision is to be the leading support network for women, ensuring that every mother can welcome her child in the dignified conditions they both deserve.

Values

RESPECT FOR LIFE

We are committed to respecting the life and dignity of the human person.

RESPONSIBILITY

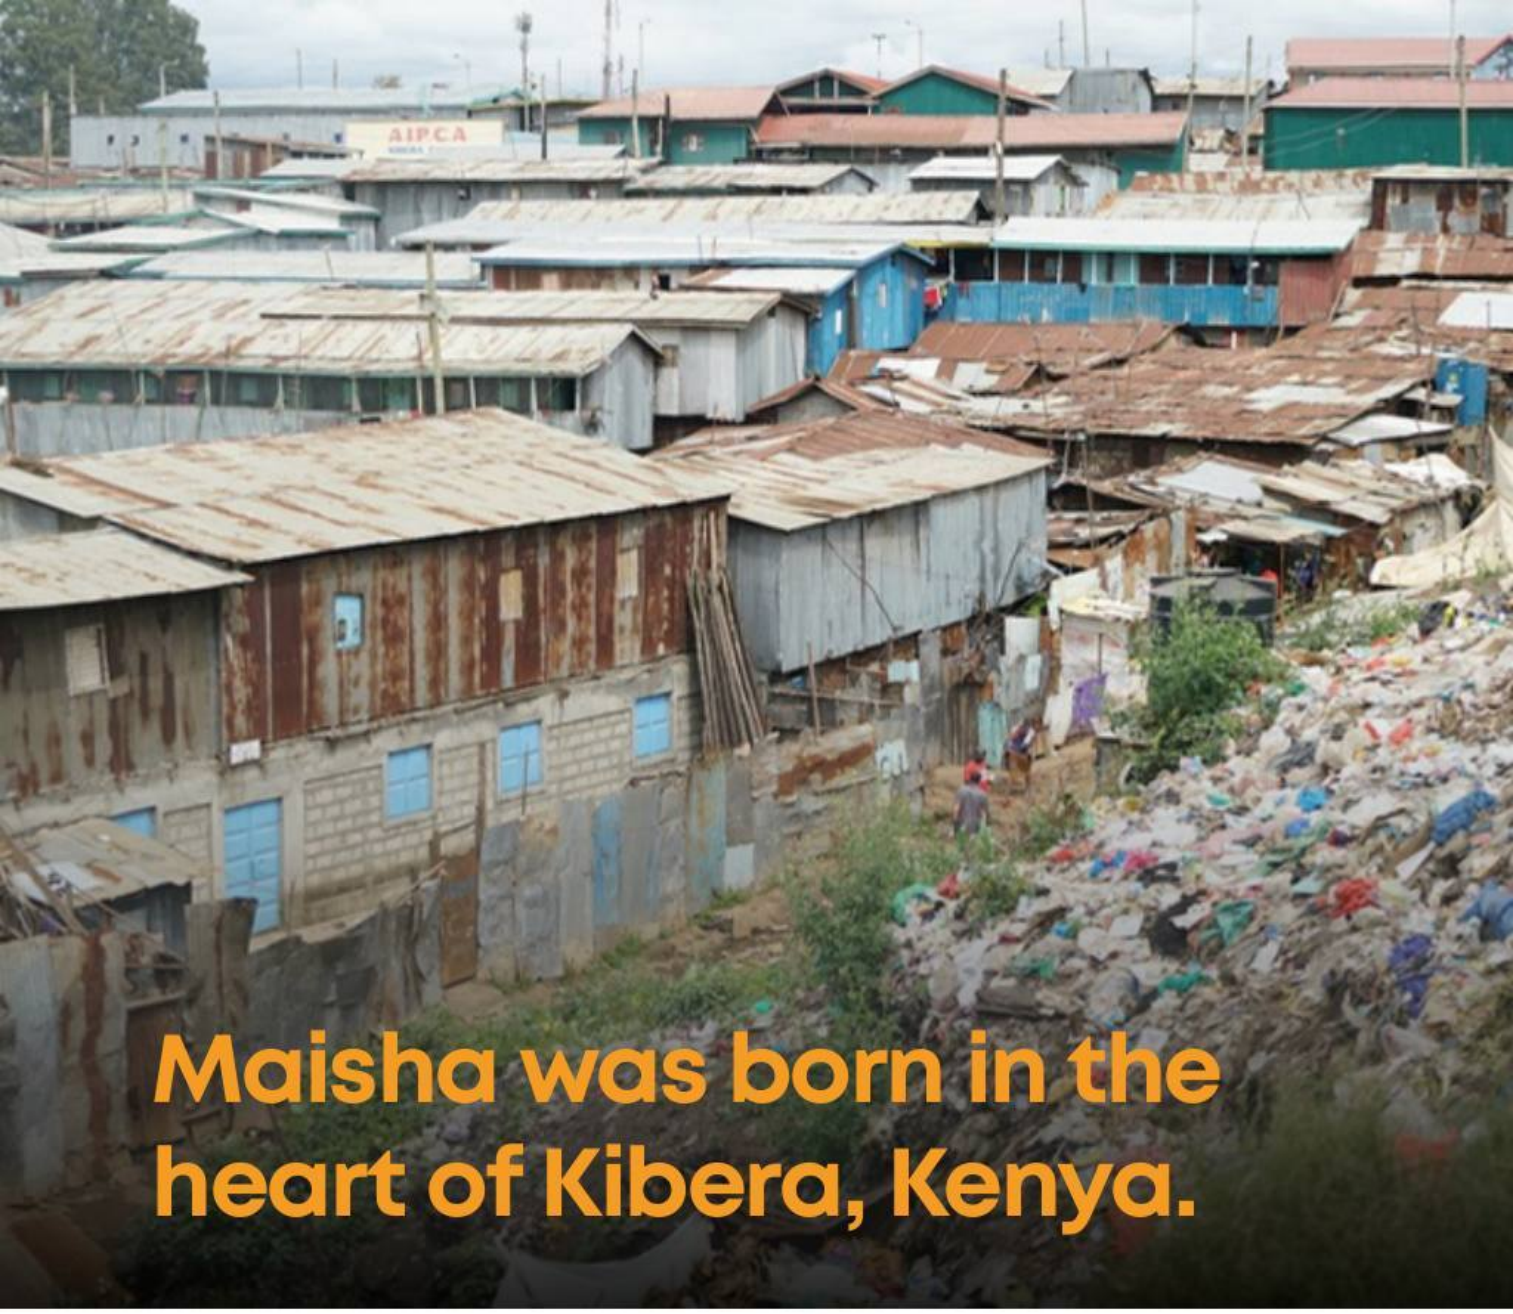

Our commitment to life translates into supporting pregnant women, mothers, and adolescents who require a support network.

COOPERATION

We work collaboratively and value the cultural exchange between diverse communities. We operate as a team, horizontally, and with the support of local actors to carry out our projects.

EQUALITY

We strive for gender equality, offering equal opportunities and guaranteeing non-discrimination.

Maisha was born in the heart of Kibera, Kenya.

Something troubled Domitila Ayot. Day after day, she saw how in her community, Kibera, many women and teenagers became pregnant with little or no support, sometimes against their will and in conditions of extreme poverty. She was also alarmed by the large number of clandestine abortions that many women felt forced to undergo due to a lack of the economic and emotional resources necessary to welcome their children into the world.

So, "Mama Domitila" decided to start working to contribute what little she could. She cut out slips of paper with her phone number and posted them in different places around Kibera, hoping that anyone looking for a shoulder to lean on could turn to her. This is how the "Edel Quinn Center of Hope" was born, dedicated to crisis pregnancies and supporting women.

Years later, a group of Chilean volunteers at a low-resource hospital in Kenya came across this small but powerful local initiative, which had become a beacon of light and life for women living in extremely adverse circumstances. Deeply moved by the reality of thousands of African women unable to give birth in a dignified manner, they wondered how they could truly support them.

After their experience, these Chileans decided to commit to helping them and become a true support network. Thus, in 2016, in partnership with the Edel Quinn Centre, Maisha, which means LIFE in Swahili, was formed, sharing the dream of housing and supporting mothers and their children in Kibera.

Today, Maisha is a network of more than 60 people focused on providing support to women and their families, united in the hope of continuing to expand this work in Kenya, Chile and other parts of the world.

About Kenya

KENYA

It is an East African country whose capital is Nairobi.

It is known for its great variety of animals, landscapes, and people from diverse tribes throughout the country.

It is officially made up of 44 ethnic groups. The main ethnic groups are the Kikuyu, Luo, Luya, Kamba, and Kalenjin.

Meaning
"Kenya" refers to Mount Kenya. In some local languages it means "luminous mountain".

Surface
591,958 km2

Population
56.4 million inhabitants

Official languages
English and Swahili

Capital

KENYA

11% of births occur outside of health facilities.

Healthcare in Kenya is precarious and requires payment, which means that many women cannot access childbirth in a health center due to the cost.

As a result of this and other reasons, 11% of births still occur mainly in homes (Kenya Demographic and Health Survey, 2022).

50% of the population has completed less than half of the school years.

13% of women and 10% of men have no education, while around 15% of women and men have only completed primary education.

The average number of years completed is 7, for both women and men (Kenya Demographic and Health Survey, 2022).

For every 100,000 live births, 530 women die in childbirth.

Maternal health is not free in Kenya, with an approximate cost of USD$160 for pregnancy and childbirth, and considering that the daily income for many does not exceed USD$1.5.

This makes it harder to access giving birth in a hospital, increasing the chances of maternal death (UNFPA, 2025).

There are only 10 midwives or nurses for every 100,000 patients.

The numbers are lower than the minimum staffing recommended by the World Health Organization (WHO) of 356 nurses or midwives per 100,000 inhabitants.

This figure is harmful to other indicators such as neonatal mortality, complications in childbirth, infections, etc (Ministry of Health, Kenya, 2020).

Kibera

It is the largest slum in Kenya and the second largest in Africa. It is an informal settlement located in the suburbs of Nairobi.

Meaning
Forest or jungle

Population density
+ 2,000 people per hectare.

Slums
Marginalized neighborhoods with limited access to basic services.

1.000.000
INHABITANTS

It is estimated that approximately one million people live in Kibera in overcrowded conditions, that is, approximately 8 people in 9m² dwellings (Bouza, 2019).

USD $1.25
DAILY FOR LIVING

More than 50% of the population settled in the slum lives in extreme poverty, with less than $2 a day.

75%

Of the population is under 18 years of age (Crossing Thresholds, About Kibera, n.d.)

40%

Of the school-age children do not attend school (Crossing Thresholds, About Kibera, n.d.)

50%

Of the adult population lack stable income (Crossing Thresholds, About Kibera, n.d.)

50%

Of the residents are unemployed (Chaffinch, 2025).

Programs

Maisha Programs

To carry out our work, we have five lines of action:

Housing

Civic Education and Human Rights

Health

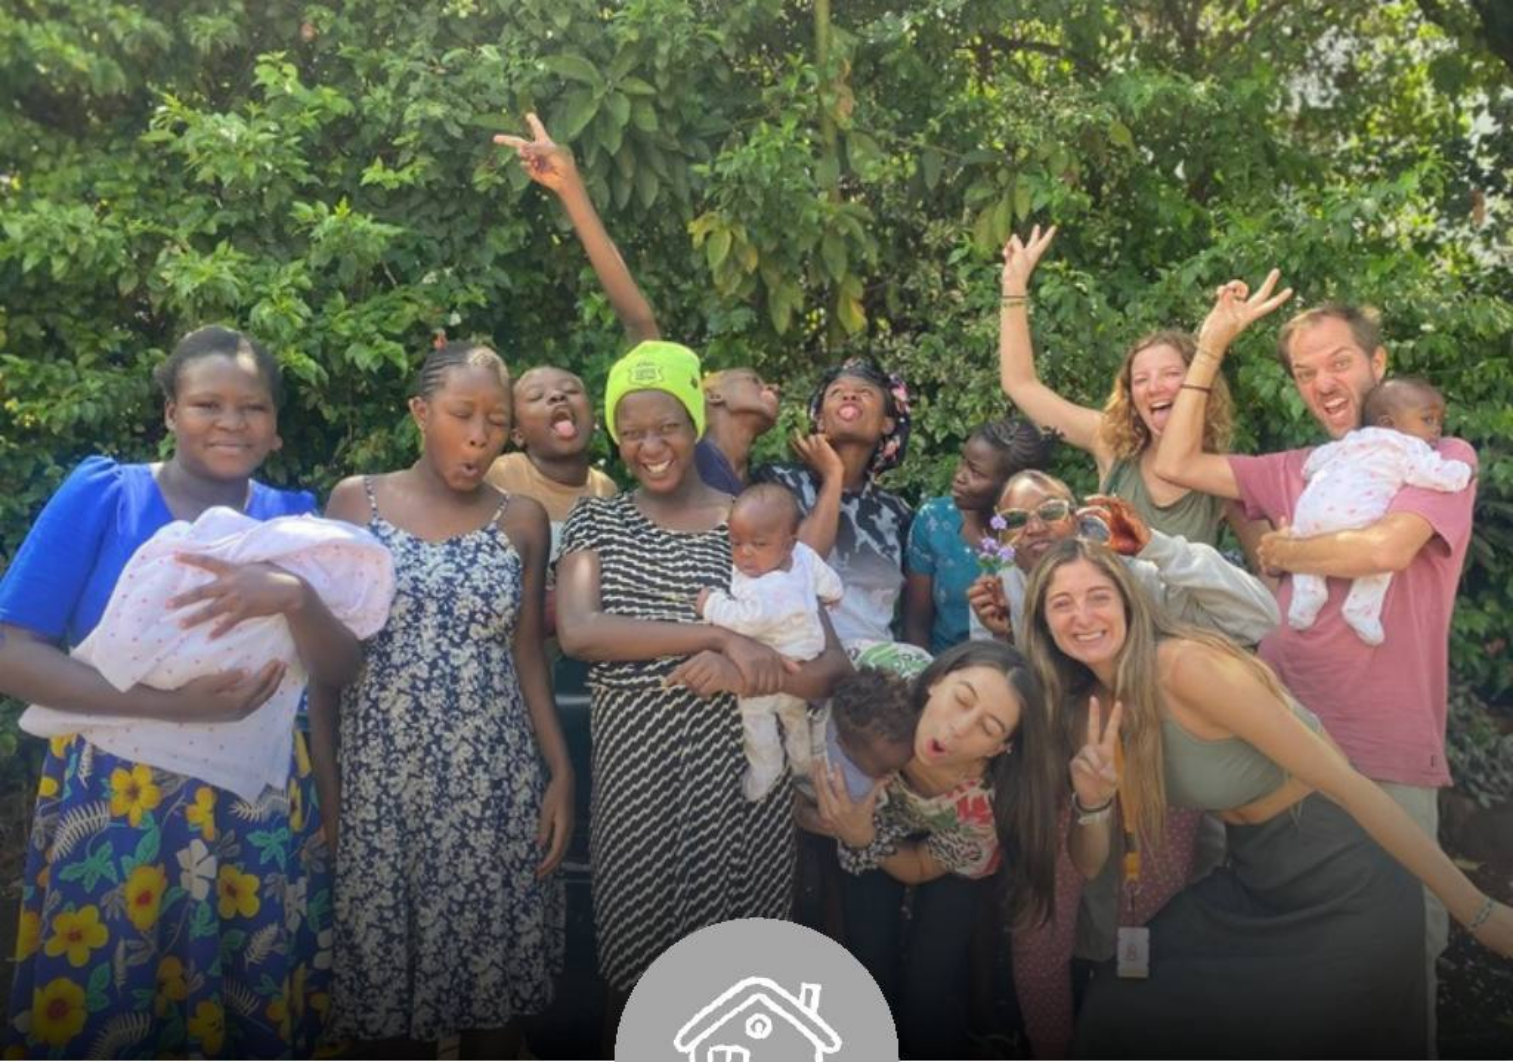

Sustainability

Sexuality and Affectivity Education

Housing

Through our housing program, we provide comprehensive support to pregnant women in crisis during pregnancy and postpartum.

We offer 24/7 telephone support, home visits, and a temporary home for mothers who do not have a support network.

We meet the basic needs of women and their newborns by providing supplies, food, and care.

We organize meeting opportunities for mothers with the local community and with a network of Maisha volunteers on the field.

Health

Through our health program, we ensure that mothers and their children receive healthcare before, during, and after childbirth.

We offer prenatal check-ups, cover the costs of childbirth care, and conduct workshops on various topics related to perinatal and newborn health.

We educate and train local health personnel to enhance skills within the community itself.

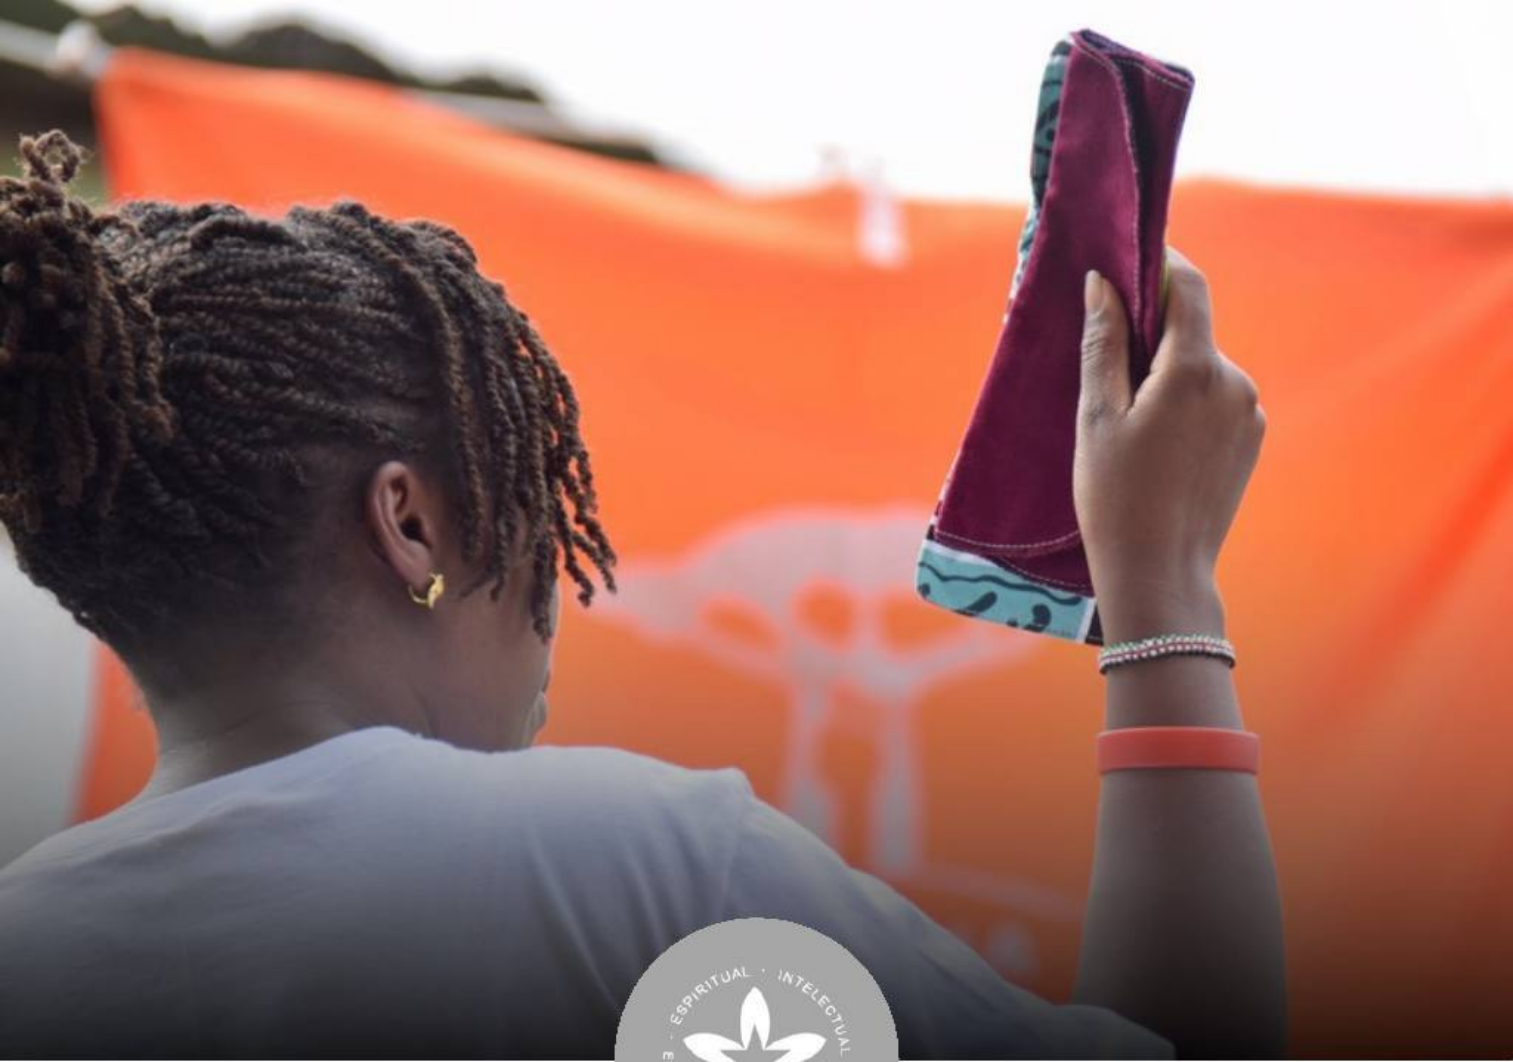

Sexuality and Affectivity Education

We accompany children, adolescents and young people in the different stages of their development under a holistic view of their affectivity and sexuality.

We work in partnership with the international program TeenSTAR, which trains our volunteers to work on issues related to the physical, psychological, emotional, intellectual and spiritual dimensions of the person.

We develop skills in decision-making based on freedom and responsibility. We train local facilitators from the community so they can continue to replicate the program throughout Kenya.

Sexuality and Affectivity Education

Within this program, we have the "Menstruation Without Rules" initiative in order to guarantee menstrual hygiene supplies.

We work to ensure that menstruation is no longer an obstacle, striving to make it informed, environmentally friendly, and accessible. Menstruation remains a problem for many girls, young women, and adults who lack the basic supplies needed during this period. Furthermore, in Kenya, it is one of the leading causes of school absenteeism.

Each session includes an educational workshop on the menstrual cycle, feminine hygiene recommendations, and the distribution of reusable menstrual kits.

Sustainability

Through the sustainability program, we empower mothers by providing them with tools that allow them to support their families autonomously and safely.

We provide them with technical skills, savings strategies, and the opportunity to explore income-generating activities. Furthermore, we foster personal and professional development by promoting recreational and learning opportunities, allowing them to broaden their horizons and boost their confidence and self-esteem.

Finally, we aim to provide them with the knowledge necessary to achieve their goals.

Civic Education and Human Rights

Educating is also caring. When a community receives comprehensive education and support, women, children, and adolescents gain confidence, health, and peace of mind.

This is why, through this program, we seek to empower mothers and young people in the Maisha community by promoting their fundamental rights.

Through research and teaching, we develop educational material and workshops, in collaboration with local and international experts.

Our 2025

This year was marked by the “Chile Fund”, significant fieldwork, and program restructuring. In this section, we want to highlight the most important projects and milestones of 2025.

JANUARY 2025

We started the year with significant progress and new challenges. In January, we began implementing the Chile Fund Against Hunger and Poverty project.

The implementation of this program allowed us to launch a sewing and finance training program for 50 women in Nairobi, with the aim of strengthening their economic autonomy and supporting family entrepreneurship, and sexuality and affectivity education workshops for more than 4,000 youth and 100 educators from the informal settlements of Kibera, Kangemi and Mathare, along with the delivery of 12,000 reusable menstrual hygiene products.

This period was also marked by significant community moments, such as saying goodbye to mothers Hellen, Faith, Natasha and Agnes, as well as saying goodbye to volunteer Fran Achurra and holding an embroidery workshop, spaces that reinforced our bond as a community and the human dimension of our work.

FEBRUARY 2025

During February, we continued to strengthen our work on the field through training, community outreach, and institutional collaboration activities. Thanks to a donation from our field volunteers, we organized a visit to the Giraffe Center with the mothers as an educational and recreational activity.

We began classes for the Tailoring and Finance program and the Sexuality and Affectivity Education program as part of the implementation of the Chile Fund. We also met with Kennedy Odede, founder of Shofco, to build relationships and explore potential strategic alliances.

The development of the Human Rights workshop, together with Strathmore University, reinforced our commitment to comprehensive training and respect for the dignity of the people we support.

MARCH 2025

In March, Montana Njaaga joined as the new operations coordinator, assuming a key role in the coordination and monitoring of Maisha's activities in Kenya.

Meanwhile, in Chile we had our first Maisha meeting of the year, which included welcoming and saying goodbye to volunteers, as well as welcoming Catalina Bustos who was returning after many years in Kenya.

In addition, we held another Belly Painting session, promoting bonding, support, and the celebration of motherhood within the larger Maisha community.

APRIL 2025

April was marked by exchange, collaboration, and the closing of processes.

We participated in La Torrija Social, within the framework of the ICADE Corporate Social Consulting program, and had the final presentation of the project developed by students of the Master in International Cooperation of the Pontifical University of Comillas, an activity that allowed us to share learnings and projections.

In addition, we were present at the UDD "International Day" Fair, where we showcased Maisha's work and shared our mission with students interested in generating a positive social impact internationally.

We were also part of the launch of the Social Action at the Albamar School, in the Valparaíso Region, where we talked with students from 6th grade to 4th year of high school about our work, the social impact and the importance of individual commitment to transform realities.

MAY 2025

During the month of May, we began implementing the PAEE project on Human Rights and Civic Education, funded by the Embassy of Chile in Kenya. This allowed us to continue our commitment to education and comprehensive support for women, girls, and youth.

For Mother's Day, we celebrated through a day of bowling, strengthening bonds and collective well-being through this activity.

We also promoted initiatives focused on entrepreneurship and economic autonomy, and we delivered reusable menstrual kits in Spring View, reaffirming our commitment to dignity and access to basic rights.

The month concluded with the farewell to our Maisha mothers Purity and Elizabeth, closing important cycles within the community we accompany.

JUNE 2025

June was a month of outreach and institutional strengthening. The TVN chilean channel launched the episode “My Place in the World”, which featured the testimony of Fernanda Almarza, a nurse midwife and one of the founders of Maisha Foundation. This report reaffirms the value of personal stories as a driving force for transformation, while also helping to spread awareness of Maisha's mission.

During this period we also signed a cooperation agreement with AIEP, opening up new opportunities for collaboration and training.

In addition, we had days of comprehensive care and training, such as the Mental 360 Training, and community gatherings that strengthened bonds. At the end of the month, we said goodbye to Barbara, Seline, and Aisha, Maisha mothers who returned home with their children.

JULY 2025

During July we deepened our work from a perspective focused on care, recognition and collaboration.

We reaffirmed our commitment to health through a donation of medical supplies to Mbagathi Hospital, strengthening our support for local institutions that play a key role in community care.

This month we also celebrated the birthday of Domtila, co-founder and director of Maisha, whose career and commitment have been fundamental to the development of our mission.

We supported significant educational processes, such as Serena and Helen's graduation from Kibondeni College of Kianda Foundation, and we advanced in strengthening networking through alliances with academic institutions.

In this context, we developed community engagement activities with AIEP and participated in the final presentation of the social consulting project carried out with Esade, spaces that allowed for the exchange of knowledge, interdisciplinary collaboration and the projection of new opportunities for joint work.

AUGUST 2025

During the month of August we created spaces for reflection and self-care through the Well Being Workshop, reinforcing the importance of integral well-being within our work.

We also shared Maisha's mission in various outreach and engagement activities, participating in the Social Fair of Finis Terrae University and the Solidarity Fair of the Santa Teresita Parish of Lo Barnechea, reaching out to people interested in social commitment and volunteering.

This period was also marked by the strengthening of our internal community, with a new Maisha reunion that allowed us to welcome and say goodbye to volunteers, as well as receive Jesu Figueroa and Felipe Amenabar, reaffirming the value of collective work and the building of meaningful bonds.

SEPTEMBER 2025

In September we started a new project developed within the framework of the Learning and Service subject, by students from ICADE, of the Pontifical University of Comillas, strengthening the link between academic training and social work in the field.

Within the framework of the Chile Fund, we delivered menstrual kits to the Gabriela Mistral School in Nairobi, an establishment sponsored by the Chilean embassy in Kenya, as part of the "Menstruation Without Rules" project.

Each kit includes 6 reusable pads, a water-resistant case, informational material and care items, and a fabric bag to gather all the material, contributing to safe and dignified menstrual management.

For this stage, we had the participation of Ambassador Patricio Aguirre and the Consul of Chile in Kenya, Romina Bravo, who accompanied and supported the development of the project on the field, reinforcing institutional collaboration and the impact of the initiative.

OCTOBER 2025

October was a month of reflection, closing processes, and shared learning. We participated in the BeDoCare Congress, which this year took place at Strathmore Universit. A day of dialogue and exchange focused on care, education, and social impact.

During this period we also celebrated the graduation ceremony of the PAEE project on Human Rights and Civic Education at the Strathmore Law Clinic, marking the end of a training cycle and the advancement of new processes for those who participated in the program.

We also received a visit from students of Crawford International School, a renowned Kenyan educational institution, creating spaces for meeting and raising awareness that allowed new generations to get closer to community work and the social commitment that Maisha promotes.

NOVEMBER 2025

During November, Fernanda Almarza, one of the founders of Maisha, participated in the podcast "Maternal Voices", where she told the story of the foundation, her experience of motherhood in Kenya and the relevance of support networks for mothering.

Trinidad Barros, a midwife and former Maisha volunteer, participated in a panel at Colegio Los Andes, sharing her experience in the field and the impact of the foundation.

We participated in the seminar "Chile-Africa: Cooperation for a Shared Future", at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, where Bernardita Sanhueza spoke about the contribution of the Maisha Foundation to health and education in Kenya.

Antonia Villablanca and Fernanda Almarza received recognition for their work and contributions as nurse-midwives in the development of the foundation, during the 50th anniversary celebration of UC Nursing and Obstetrics. As part of the same commemoration, M. Jesús Figueroa, also a nurse-midwife, participated in a discussion about her role as coordinator of the sexual education program and later as field operations coordinator.

DECEMBER 2025

In December, we received the IF Social Impact Prize 2025 for the EmpowerHer project, a milestone that reaffirmed the value of the work we do with women to strengthen their autonomy and future prospects.

We shared moments of encounter by participating in the Latin Gala in Nairobi, part of whose profits were donated to Maisha's work.

Within the framework of the "Menstruation Without Rules" project, funded by the Chile Fund and in partnership with Kianda Foundation, during the year we managed to support more than 2,000 youth with education in sexuality and affectivity, delivering more than 1,200 reusable menstrual kits to girls.

We ended the year with Speak2Save and students from Crawford International School, who visited Maisha to celebrate Christmas and spend time with the mothers and volunteers. During this visit, each mother was reminded that her future is valuable, full of possibilities, and worthy of being cared for and protected.

Maisha in Numbers

Since we started this project in 2017, we have grown steadily. Below, we present the cumulative impact we have had over these years.

Maisha Mothers

We know how important it is to put a face to the work we do. Without a doubt, the Maisha Mothers are at the heart of our project. They move us, inspire us, and motivate us every day to continue working for this cause.

I am Juliet Achieng, also known as Mama Taurel. I had a great experience in the Maisha House. I really loved my interaction with the volunteers and the Field Coordinators. They assisted me in many ways: I always felt supported and I found a new family with Maisha.

I appreciated the workshops. They were really fun. The things I enjoyed included Computer Classes and Sexual Education. These really impacted me and I learnt a lot. I want to especially say how much I appreciated that my hospital bills were covered by Maisha and I was supported during my 10-hour labour! I am grateful that my child is here with me and I want to build the best future for her.

I learnt Tailoring and I am using my skills to produce reusable pads for the Chile Fund Project. I also know bead making, knitting and crochet and I am looking for ways to use them to make money.

I had dreams of rejoining college and earning a Diploma, and I am working toward this goal. Thank you so much!!

Juliet Achieng

My name is Cynthia Nabwire. I am a proud mother to a healthy baby boy called Zedane Ethan. I loved the skills I learnt in Maisha, particularly knitting which I didn't know before.

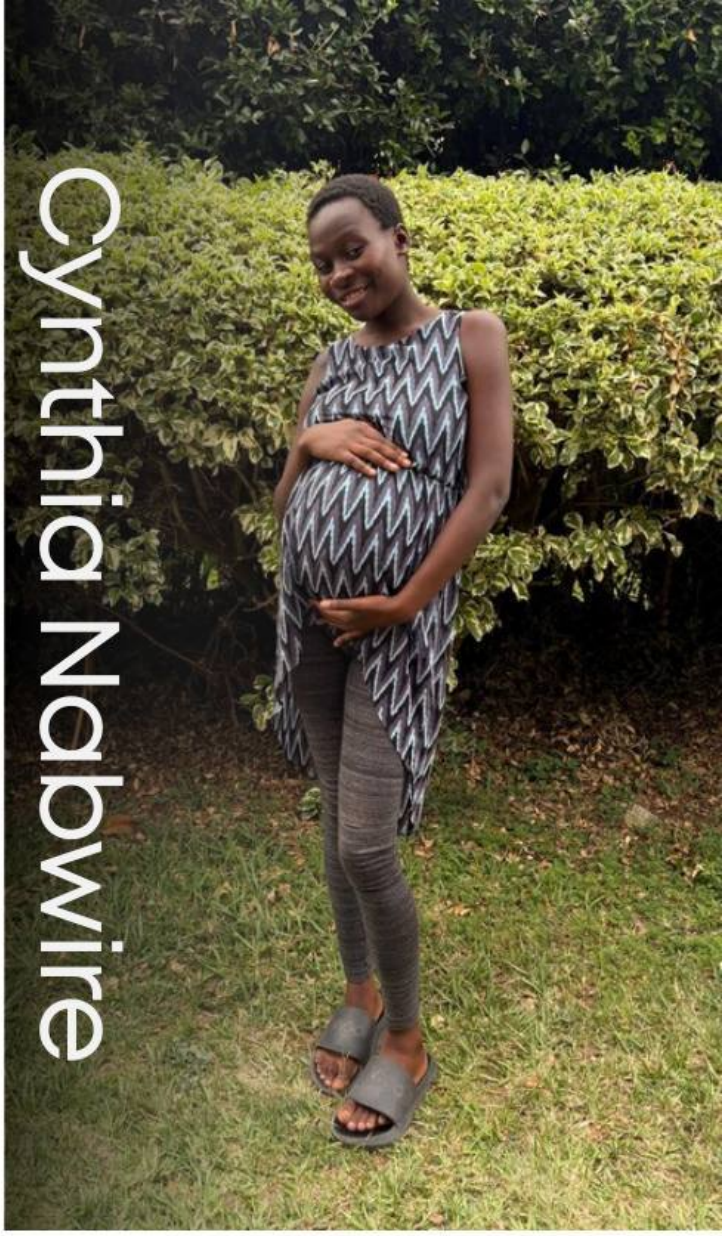

I am so grateful for the hospital bills that Maisha helped me to cover. I don't even know what would have happened to me otherwise.

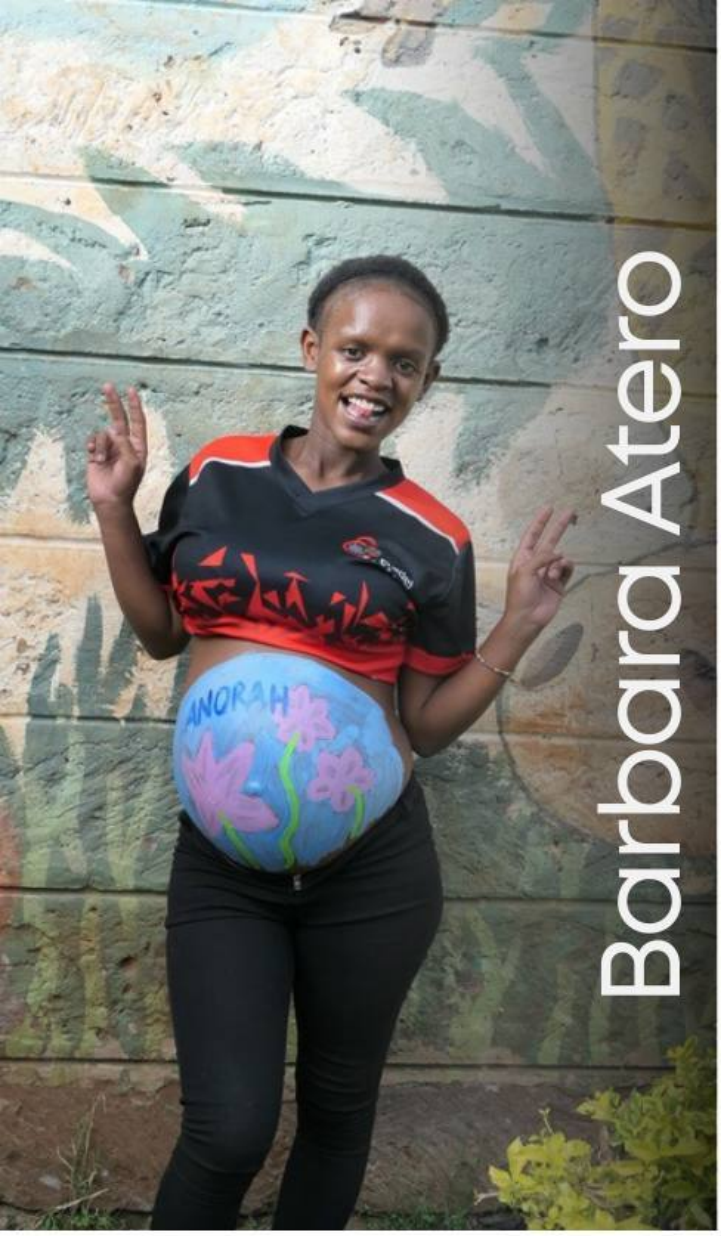

I learnt how to live with other people. That was really important. I also loved how Domtila took care of us.

I plan to rejoin school come January. My family is ready to support me on this.

Thank you Maisha Family!

Cynthia Nabwire

Barbara Atero

My name is Barbara Atero, mother to Annora Carmen Agutu. My Maisha experience was amazing! I learned so much and I was grateful for all that Maisha helped me with.

I want to also thank Domi for taking care of us like her children. The volunteers were kind to us. I am especially grateful to Vero.

I learnt how to knit and I knit baby hats for my daughter. This was the best skill.

I plan to go back to school next year, God-willing. I will remain in touch!

Seline Atieno

Hi, I am Seline Atieno and my son's name is Kyle. I was in the Maisha House for about 7 months. I learned so many skills: Computer, Tailoring, Cooking. These skills helped me a lot even now when I am out of Maisha.

I was able to get a short term job because of my computer skills. Currently, with Tailoring, I am producing reusable sanitary pads for Maisha and I am earning some money from this.

I want to thank Maisha Foundation for the opportunity they have given me since many girls need this assistance.

I want to join college and I am saving up for this vision.

Seline Atieno

Hi! My name is Vivian Emali and my child's name is CJay Kian. I loved my experience in the Maisha House. I felt really supported in my pregnancy.

I enjoyed tailoring and the health talks. I also loved the group therapy sessions with Mental 360.

I am able to work producing reusable pads for Maisha. I also have a job with the county, cleaning the streets.

I am able to remain working there thanks to the soft skills I learnt about working with people and doing things well.

Thank you so much for having me in Maisha!

Vivian Emali

My name is Blessings Achebe, mother to Raphael Jamith. I am so grateful for Maisha for accompanying me in my pregnancy journey and my delivery.

I am grateful for TeenSTAR and getting to know myself. I also loved the health talks, especially childbirth and how to take care of my baby.

Currently, I live with my boyfriend, I live close to my sister and I feel very supported in my life after Maisha.

I use my tailoring skills to produce reusable sanitary pads. I also learnt crocheting and I use my skills to make shrugs and people buy them, complementing me for my neat work. I can also teach other people what I learnt in the health talks on how to care for one's children. I am grateful for the skills I learnt!

May God bless you all!

Blessings Achebe

My name is Florence Joan and my baby is called Killan Kisra. Thank you Maisha for paying my hospital bills and helping me to nurture my child umtil where she has reached.

I loved TeenSTAR and I am using the knowledge to teach my little sisters back at home. I also loved computers though I would still love the opportunity to further improve it.

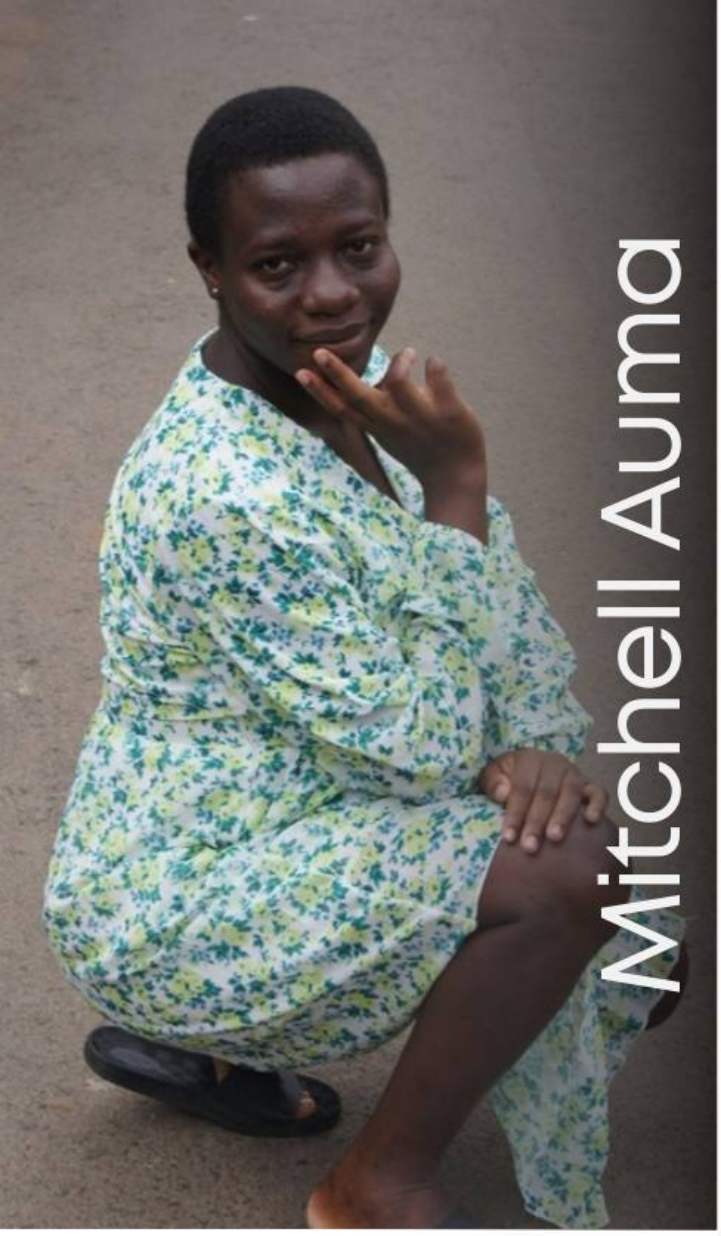

I loved the cooking classes with the Latin Group on Wednesdays! I loved Ingred's Leadership and Business skills on Friday.

Thank you Maisha team. Continue with that spirit of helping people.

Thank you!

Florence Joan

My name is Mitchel Auma. My son is called Velt Macrae. I want to thank Maisha for everything, I have had a great experience.

Thank you for taking care of my hospital bills. I had a c-section and I was so grateful to be assisted with all the bills for this. Thank God I am alive!

I enjoyed all the workshops. Everything we did was beneficial, particularly wellbeing and TeenSTAR. I will continue knitting and making bracelets to earn some income and keep myself busy when I am not studying.

Next year, I plan to continue with High School. Maisha is giving hope to girls and thank you so much!

Volunteers

Experiencing Kenya and Maisha from the inside is a life-changing experience. That's why many of our volunteers and team members wanted to share their stories with you.

Verónica Córdova

In 2024, I made one of the most unique and important decisions of my life. After a year living and studying in Madrid, I decided to take on the challenge of moving to Nairobi, Kenya, as the foundation's operations coordinator. With no real connection to the foundation beyond the experiences of a few people, Maisha's mission resonated deeply with me, and perhaps contrary to the logic of my career path, it also made sense to seize this opportunity: to work for two years in a completely different country, culture, and context, challenging my comfort zone and contributing my knowledge to the beautiful and meaningful work of the Maisha Foundation.

My journey working in the field began in October 2024 and ended in February 2026, and even now, several months after landing in Chile, it's very difficult to put into words what the year and a half at Maisha meant. There were so many things: an emotional rollercoaster, incredible volunteers, admirable women and people, countless tasks, challenging experiences, frustrations and triumphs, unique places; condensing it all into a few sentences is very difficult. I think that so far, the only people with whom I've been able to share words, memories, and life lessons from this period are those with whom I shared that experience, who lived through everything that Maisha meant and continues to mean. Maisha, Life. Such a powerful word in itself, but one that takes on even greater meaning when faced in a context of extreme difficulty and vulnerability. Adverse contexts in which we often imagine that the word “life” becomes dimmed and loses its meaning, but let me tell you that it is quite the opposite: despite all that adversity, the desire to live, to fight, to share flourishes; there is never a lack of a smile, a child's hug, African music and dance, sharing a chai tea or a mandazi with the few resources available.

Personally, as coordinator, I experienced the constant challenge of not losing sight of the purpose of being in fieldwork, to connect with the women and their babies, their pain and challenges, so that, through our programs, we could give them a better pregnancy and childbirth, more opportunities, and the ability to develop and value themselves as women in a society that often marginalizes and discriminates against them. I had to fight myself not to be absorbed by the computer, the desk management and administration, which, although necessary, is not where Maisha finds its meaning, but rather in the Home (shelter), in the schools we visit, and in every person we interact with. That is where the value of this great organization lies, and I experienced firsthand the impact that the work of a great Chilean and Kenyan team can have on the lives of our Maisha women. I could talk about statistics and indicators, but that's what this report is for; For me, what most shapes the experience of those of us who work at Maisha are the stories of the women we met personally, who, against all odds, thrive in one way or another: whether in their work, through emotional strength, improved mental health, self-awareness and self-esteem, conscious and responsible motherhood, or in so many other ways. These are the life stories that remain, that leave a lasting mark, that inspire us every day to continue working so that more and more women can grow and shine, to build, grain by grain, a more just society. These are the women, with faces, with names—Serena, Vivian, Hellen, Jully, Tash, Elizabeth, Blessing, Sheila, and so many others—for whom every donation and every effort is worthwhile. Staying in touch with them and learning about their achievements, how their children have grown, and their future plans is what fills my heart now that I'm no longer there.

If I could tell you the stories of overcoming adversity and resilience of each of them, I could talk forever. Many live through experiences and situations beyond our comprehension, lacking support networks, yet despite all that, they are admirable, strong, and courageous women who achieve things that many wouldn't in their shoes. That's what Maisha is all about: giving these remarkable women and their children the tools they need, through our programs, to unleash the potential that has always been there, dormant, and build a better future for themselves.

I am a witness that Maisha is: life, community, affection, opportunity and, above all, a space where these women can grow and be what they always were, great and admirable women, who chose the life of their children despite the enormous difficulties along the way.

Jacinta Fernández

I returned from Kenya two months ago, and I'm still struggling to believe that a dream and a goal I've had for so long has finally come true. I went, I was there, and I came back, all in the blink of an eye. But even though it feels like it flew by, the sheer number of things I experienced and that happened during those six months is still hard to put into words.

People ask me how it went, and all I can say is "incredible," with a huge smile on my face, because describing what was undoubtedly the most rewarding and challenging experience of my life isn't easy. At first, even if you talk to people who have already volunteered, hear about their experiences, and get a general idea of what they went through, it's completely different to experience it firsthand.

To be honest, my first few days were quite overwhelming, given the level of poverty I saw and experienced in Kibera: the amount of garbage, the children playing in the streets oblivious to their surroundings, the lack of basic services, and people just going about their daily lives. And then arriving at the shelter, with teenage girls who came from the same place, with lives completely different from mine, and who still welcomed me with open arms. I never imagined I would feel so welcomed and comfortable from the very first moment.

Each of those experiences profoundly shaped my volunteer work, and I will always be grateful for that. For me, going to Maisha marked a turning point in my personal and professional life as a social worker.

What never ceased to amaze me, and which I always appreciated, was how I was able to build a bond of trust with teenage girls who didn't know me at all.

Seeing how they trusted me, how they told me about themselves and their lives, and how we shared sorrows and joys was, by far, the most meaningful thing for me. I think that's what makes being a volunteer of the housing program so special: it allows you to get to know all the mothers in the home on a daily basis, and in the end, they come to you for anything.

Sharing daily life with them: our logical thinking classes where we did Sudoku puzzles, the book club, teamwork activities, goodbyes, playdays, but especially the knitting classes. These classes were taught by a volunteer who was there before me, and whom I ran into for a couple of weeks.

I didn't know how to knit and I wanted to learn so I could continue teaching those classes, because I saw it was one of the moms' favorites. So I learned and was able to share that space with them: a space for learning, trial and error, helping each other, cultivating patience and respect, and achieving small but significant goals, like knitting hats and socks for their babies.

Another opportunity that allowed me to forge special bonds was making home visits and accompanying them home when they left the foundation. The fact that they let me into that intimate space of their lives, sometimes with pride and other times with embarrassment, is something I truly treasure. Being able to get to know them a little better, their families, and what their lives were like at Kibera was impactful.

Hearing raw and painful stories of abandonment by partners or family, facing motherhood alone, rejection, and violence. But what was always impressive was the strength and resilience with which they carried on. Despite everything, smiles, a desire to learn, and hope were never lacking.

Witnessing and accompanying them on their journeys of growth, transformation, and empowerment is a memory that fills me with pride and a sense of privilege. I feel so fortunate that I was able to witness it and that they allowed me to be a part of those moments in their lives. Seeing them again after graduation, empowered as mothers, determined to give their babies and themselves a life of opportunity, is a precious memory I will always cherish. Even now, in Chile, receiving calls or messages from my girls is a constant reminder of what we experienced together and the friendships we forged.

I want to express my deepest gratitude to Maisha for giving me the opportunity to live this experience and fulfill my dream. To the people with whom I shared this journey during my volunteering: Vero, Marga, Fran, Raquel, Miri, and Berni, because without them the fieldwork wouldn't have been the same, and with whom I share a very important part of my life. To Domi, an amazing woman, dedicated to her cause, and to Maisha, a role model. And to my girls, who taught me so much and who will always have a special place in my heart.
Nakupenda sana Kenya. Asante sana.

Magdalena Soto

I'm Manena Soto, a 53-year-old woman who received a wonderful gift from life. I arrived on November 27th, after spending two incredible months volunteering with the Maisha Foundation in Kenya. It's very difficult to describe my time there; words simply can't do it justice. This experience is both wonderful and powerful.

We think we're going to do something for them, but ultimately they do so much more for us. This community welcomes you with open arms, where we wholeheartedly give each other so much that we're often unaware of in life.

I went to volunteer with the housing program, where my greatest lesson was learning to see life in a simpler way, how fortunate we are, and how rewarding it is to help others. Like many things in life, this volunteer work came to me through my nephew. He kept telling me, "It's going to change your life," and I was a little skeptical... But it definitely left a mark on me and how I see and feel.

This foundation was born from a desire to celebrate life and empower women, values I saw reflected very clearly. These women—young girls, really—face a reality where they often haven't grasped its true importance. With their fears and dreams, with the possibility of improving their lives and the lives of their children. And with them, the great Domtila, who, with immense generosity and profound dedication, welcomes them all equally, true to her very essence.

It was a very emotional few days, but ultimately, I feel immense gratitude for everything I experienced and for what these mothers and their babies received. Like these mothers, it shows how important it is to want to progress, to have that intention, to take risks and make a commitment. The joy found in simple things, the connections, the profound lessons learned. I thank Maisha for giving me this incredible opportunity; every minute was worth it.

Margarita Pollock

My name is Margarita Pollock, and I volunteered with Maisha between March and August 2025, participating in the Sexuality and Affectivity Education and Health programs. As a nurse-midwife, I learned about the foundation through the experiences shared by previous volunteers, and it became a dream I was finally able to fulfill.

During my six months in Kenya I was able to contribute from different areas: I conducted sexuality and affectivity education classes, community health workshops, emergency management, prenatal check-ups and support in childbirth.

Every moment, from education to direct care, allowed me to get to know the needs of the community firsthand and provide tools that could make a real difference.

Those months were as challenging as they were wonderful. Working with the Maisha mothers was an immense gift: accompanying them, listening to their stories, seeing their resilience, and witnessing their progress day by day left a deep mark on me.

Experiencing firsthand the reality of extreme poverty and meeting the people who face it with such strength is a life-changing experience.

I am deeply grateful to every mother I worked with, to the foundation, and to my fellow volunteers. Thank you for an experience that not only transformed me professionally but also made me a better person.

Marco de la Jara

My name is Coto de la Jara, and I spent a month in Kenya doing photojournalistic work for the Maisha Foundation in collaboration with Scorpi. My work focused on documenting daily life within the foundation, the context in which the women who are part of it live, and the history of the foundation itself.

I learned about the foundation thanks to Margarita Pollock, my girlfriend, who worked for six months at Maisha, and we shared her last month in Kenya.

It was a very significant experience on a professional level. Working in the field, with very different schedules and dynamics than usual, allowed me to better understand the complexity of the context and the responsibility involved in documenting other people's realities, without intervening or forcing a narrative.

Meeting the Maisha mothers and having so many of them open up to me was a great gift. Being able to spend time with them, listen to their stories, and build that trust was a fundamental part of the process and the purpose of the work.

I really enjoyed the experience and it would be a dream I would repeat for a longer period, to deepen the project, build relationships over more time and develop a more consistent and continuous documentary work.

Going to Kenya with Maisha had been a dream of mine for many years, and yet the experience exceeded all my expectations. I will be here from November 2025 to March 2026 as a volunteer in the sustainability program, primarily supporting the EmpowerHer program.

It is a privilege to contribute from the perspective of Occupational Therapy to a project that accompanies women in their process of sexual education, pregnancy and motherhood, providing them with support in their reintegration into daily life.

The warmth and trust of the Maisha mothers are among the things that touch me most during my time at the center. Every meeting, conversation, and class reminds me that meaningful intervention doesn't require many resources; generally, less is more.

Seeing how small gestures, safe spaces, and simple tools can empower a woman in her motherhood is a very powerful experience for me as a therapist.

Working alongside Domtila is also incredibly inspiring. Her kindness, empathy, and genuine presence for each mother demonstrates that when you act with dedication and love, the impact is real. She has that special combination of firmness and support that makes everyone—mothers, volunteers, and the team—feel welcome and safe. Knowing her is a constant reminder of what it truly means to support someone.

This experience has greatly broadened my professional and personal perspective. It's helping me understand parenting from a more essential perspective, where presence, calmness, and consistency are more important than any technique. It also reaffirms the importance of ongoing support, community involvement, and a deep respect for each woman's story.

Maisha doesn't just accompany pregnancies; we accompany lives. Being part of this process, even if only for a few months, is something I will always carry with me.

Asante sana, Maisha, for teaching me so much during this time and for reminding me that true impact arises when we share who we are, not just what we know.

I hope I have the opportunity to return!

I'm thrilled to share with you my incredible two-and-a-half-month experience in Kenya. It was an experience filled with emotions, learning, and above all, so much love. Working with the mothers and their babies was an invaluable gift. Every day, they inspired me with their strength, resilience, and unconditional love. Being able to accompany them on this important journey in their lives was an honor. I feel fortunate to have been able to make a difference, however small, in their lives.

But I didn't just share this experience with the mothers; I was also fortunate enough to share it with an incredible team of volunteers. All of them, much younger than my children, taught me the importance of empathy, compassion, and solidarity. Together, we created a supportive and loving environment that made my stay even more special. In addition to working, we had the opportunity to explore this beautiful country. We went on amazing safaris, saw majestic animals in their natural habitat, and shared unforgettable moments. Every day was an adventure, and every experience was a gift.

I want to thank everyone who made this experience possible. To the mothers and their babies, for allowing me to be a part of their lives. To my fellow volunteers, for their support and friendship. And to the organization, for giving me the opportunity to live this extraordinary experience.

These past months have left an indelible mark on my heart. They've taught me to appreciate what I have, to value life, and to love unconditionally. I feel fortunate to have experienced this adventure, and I hope to return someday and continue making a difference in the lives of other women. I also want to thank Domtila for her dedication to these women and to us volunteers; without her charisma and generosity, this might not have been possible.

I participated as a field volunteer for Maisha between the end of 2024 and the beginning of 2025. If someone were to ask me today what I think was my greatest impact — and also my favorite part of being a volunteer — I would say it was accompanying them: sharing the day-to-day life in the house where they live during their pregnancy, especially with the simplest activities like playing board games or talking.

There I met women who earned my complete admiration: strong, intelligent, and full of energy. I realized that a large part of our contribution, beyond providing healthcare support, is offering a support network and ensuring they aren't held back by financial difficulties.

We'll help them start believing they can, organize and map their dreams, and define the steps needed to achieve them. We're not going to change the world for anyone; they're the only ones who can.

But I do deeply believe that we can empower them, support them, give them love and laughter, and be part of their network, their extended family, so that they themselves can change their destiny. So thank you to all the moms—especially my favorites, haha—for being such incredible women, and thank you to Maisha for pushing them to be even better every day.

When I arrived in Nairobi at the end of June to begin my volunteer work at Maisha, I knew I would experience things that would leave a mark on me, but I did not imagine the magnitude of what this experience has meant to me.

Mental preparation and years of study on approaches, methodologies, and theoretical frameworks, however valuable they may be, do not prepare you for what happens when you work directly with the people to whom all that is directed.

During the 3 months I was in Maisha, I had the opportunity to accompany Blessings, Sheila, Diana, Keilah, Naomi, Florence, Julie, Phenny, Eunice, Tracey and Cynthia firsthand during their time in the program.

I mention their names because they are not just users; they are women, mothers, with complex life stories, and with a strength and resilience that is learned by observing, not reading. They are the embodiment of the reason why I and Maisha, along with all the others who are part of the community, work.

We shared conversations, concerns, laughter, doubts, silences, and small daily achievements, sharing our day-to-day lives with a sense of closeness. With them, and thanks to Maisha, I understood that our work of individual support goes far beyond facilitating activities; it's about listening respectfully, being present, and recognizing each person's capacity to reinvent themselves, because everyone has that capacity.

And speaking from my more professional perspective, working on the ground allowed me to see what happens between the theory we study and the practice we think we've perfected. I saw how a rights-based approach translates into daily decisions, how the gender perspective is incorporated (or not) into practice, and how planning should adapt to human rhythms, not the other way around. Ultimately, I confirmed that cooperation only makes sense when genuine listening takes center stage.

But none of this would have been the same without the Maisha team and my colleagues. Miri, Jaci, Marga, Vero, and Berni in particular have been a home and a constant source of support. In the social sector, where resources are sometimes scarce, the human and professional qualities of the teams are what make the difference, and Maisha is a clear example of that. I learned so much from them.

Upon my return to Madrid, I brought many things with me: people who will always be with me even though they live thousands of miles away, a more refined sensitivity, a more conscious perspective. Nairobi and Maisha have not only been a place, but also a space for personal and professional transformation.

Although my on-site work has ended, I remain connected to the Foundation in a different role, but that's another story. This post is primarily a thank you to the users and the team, to all those who transformed the fieldwork from a mere concept into a holistic life experience.

My professional practice as an international aid worker in Maisha has been a profoundly enriching experience, which allowed me to understand development cooperation from the reality of field work and its complexity, and the importance of building relationships based on respect, listening and collaboration.

Throughout this experience, I faced cultural, linguistic, and social challenges that required me to be more flexible and open. Living with realities different from my own helped me understand that effective cooperation goes far beyond technical knowledge and requires sensitivity, understanding of the context, and a critical perspective on our own role.

Daily life in Nairobi is intense and demanding. The pace, the heat, and the demands of working with the mothers often lead to exhaustion, but this is transformed upon arriving at the shelter and sharing time with them, listening to them, supporting them, and spending time together, which renews energy and gives meaning to the work done.

Being able to be there for them, to offer real support, and to share my love with them during such an important stage in their lives has been one of the most valuable experiences of this internship. I am also deeply grateful for the affection and welcome the Maisha mothers have given me in return. I take away many professional and personal lessons that will stay with me forever.
Thank you, Maisha.

Meeting Maisha has been very important to me. A Chilean foundation that was born from young people, who had a lot of drive and strength, creativity, tenacity, fortitude and ambition….

It's incredible what they've achieved and the impact they're having! The support they've given to so many young women in Kenya is amazing; they've helped change so many lives!

Of all the work I've done, what has touched me most deeply is accompanying a mother during childbirth! I think I'll always have that unforgettable memory: seeing that little fish emerge from its tank, making its way into life, whatever the circumstances, with an incredibly brave mother. It's been a truly impactful experience for me!

My relationship with Domtila was also wonderful! She's a saint! I hold her dear in my heart! I have immense admiration for her and for the entire Foundation and everyone who works there!

Thank you for this opportunity!
